Rocky Mount, NC - 1998 -- Jerry Barfield decided to launch the business in 1998 from the basement of his home. He had previously worked in the general construction industry and decided that of all facets in this industry, he preferred roofing above the rest. This decision was difficult as the roofing industry is ranked as the second most dangerous occupation in the United States. Jerry's wife, Christina joined him at B&M and concentrated on building a strong sales staff and marketing for the company. Their perseverance and dedication have been key factors in operating a successful business while providing their customers with quality work, founded on honesty and integrity.

"The decision to open a business was hard enough, but to open a roofing business was even harder when considering the danger involved in this industry," said Jerry Barfield. "We are incredibly proud of how we have grown and prospered over the years. It's not just about being successful, it's about building relationships, hiring the right employees, and providing quality roofing services to our customers."
